Five - - - Years of - War Work

A Résumé

FOREWORD.

In issuing this brief résumé of work done in the various military areas during the war we would acknowledge most gratefully the cordial co-operation of the general public who have so liberally subscribed to the necessary funds, of Government and military authorities for many privileges and steady support, of missionary societies and other similar bodies for the release of men, of those chaplains who have so warmly supported our secretaries in their efforts, and of those men and women who in India and from other countries have temporarily served on our staff. Without all this help the work would have been altogether impossible.

Whatever credit may accrue is due to them more largely than to any capacity which the Y.M.C.A. organization may possess. It is, however, with a deep sense of privilege rather than any feeling of congratulation that this report is issued.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS OF INDIA AND CEYLON,
5, Russell Street, Calcutta.

SUMMARY.

The war work of the Y.M.C.A. of India and Ceylon began with the sending of 12 secretaries with the first convoy of Indian troops to France, October, 1914. Very soon thereafter the Territorials arrived in India, and work for them was begun in a considerable number of stations. In July, 1915, the Mesopotamia work was started, followed by East Africa in November, 1915, and by Egypt and Palestine in June, 1917.

In all more than 375 centres were established, and 591 different men and women served as full-time paid secretaries. The total amount of money spent directly on the work in the field, up to the end of 1918, was Rs. 29,92,872-4-9.

In addition, a staff of 17 secretaries and an office force of 65 were required for administration at the Calcutta headquarters, at an expense of Rs. 3,70,000 approximately.

TYPES OF WORK DONE.

A Mission of Christian Social Service for Creating and Sustaining Morale.

Provision of social and recreational centres, as fully equipped as location and other controlling circumstances would permit, with pianos, billiard and bagatelle tables, libraries, papers and magazines in English and vernaculars, indoor games, writing tables and paper, lounge rooms, canteens and halwai shops, gramophones, tabalas, dholaks, harmoniums, cinemas, stereopticons, athletic gear.

Concerts, dramas, cinema shows, magic-lantern lectures, "pagal" gymkhanas.

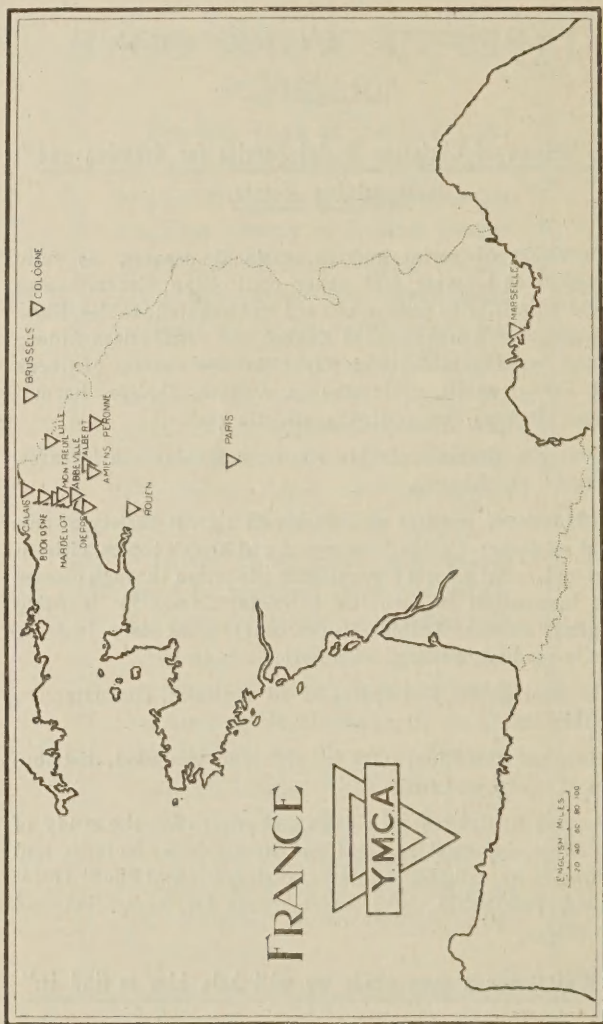

Educational lectures and classes on a great variety of cultural subjects; "talks" on moral and health topics, citizenship and social reform; vocational education through classes and instruction in technical subjects, classes for learning English, French, Arabic, Hindustani; elementary instruction in reading, writing, arithmetic.

Outdoor games and sports of all varieties, tournaments, gymkhanas.

Hospital visitation, gifts for sick and wounded, distribution of sweets and fruit.

Among British troops, classes and groups for the study of the Bible, informal services and hymn-sings, lectures and addresses on religious subjects, distribution of khaki Testaments, Fellowship clubs, quiet rooms for meditation and devotion.

"Whatsoever a man needs we will help him to find it."

FRANCE.

First Y.M.C.A. War Work in France was done by the twelve secretaries from India who arrived in Marseilles with the first convoy of Indian troops, November, 1914. Work continued until early 1920 in full co-operation with British Y.M.C.A.

Centres : 9 in Marseilles, 3 each in Rouen and Boulogne ; one each in Hardehot, Montreuil, Calais, Dieppe, Amiens and Lille, 4 Brigade centres with 4th and 5th Cavalry Divisions moving constantly—from St. Quentin to Ypres ; with 40 Labour Companies in 3rd and 5th Army areas ; also with Indian Artillery Ammunition Columns.

83 secretaries in all on staff during period November, 1914, to December, 1919 ; 49 Indians and Ceylonese, 34 Europeans.

Indian Soldiers' Club at Paris, constantly filled with parties on leave : sight-seeing under proper guidance and introduction to men and women representing the best life of city and nation. Similar clubs in Brussels and Cologne.

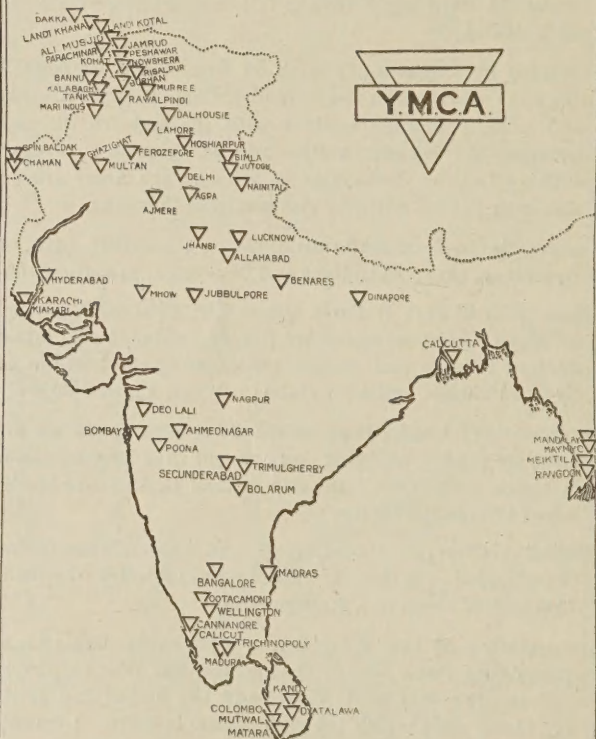

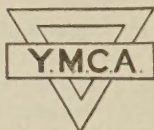

Letter-writing : hundreds of thousands of letters written for illiterate sepoys, relieving anxiety and thus keeping them in touch with home ; inquiry bureau in India re-established broken connections.

Hospital visitation : " comforts " and entertainments for the wounded, but most of all the personal touch of friendship and of home in a strange land.

Interpretation of the West to the sepoys : for these men, discovering a new world, that which was best in people and customs was made clear, and the underlying spirit and ideals upon which the civilisation is built. Likewise many opportunities to interpret India to western peoples.

Labour Corps Work : 12 British workers familiar with Indian languages and customs : Hindi, Urdu, Bengali, Marathi, Khassi, Lushai, Burmese. Recreation huts, gramophones, cinemas, lantern shows, lectures, concerts, games, literature, free stationery ; hospital work, gifts and comforts ; religious services for Christians.

INDIA

INDIA.

At outbreak of war 3 branches among British troops. Special work for Territorials began in November, 1914, steadily increasing in extent until December, 1918, when there were 56 branches.

Indian Army work began in 1916, when 6 branches were established; by December, 1918, 27 branches.

Special work for six months during 1919 (in addition to above) in connection with the Afghanistan Expedition: 10 branches for British and 10 for Indian troops, at Peshawar, Jamrud, Ali Masjid, Landi Kotal, Landi Khana, Dakka, Chaman, Fort Spin Baldok.

Work for troops on furlough from Mesopotamia in 1917 and 1918 at several centres; sight-seeing tours, lectures and classes on Indian subjects.

Speeding and greeting of troops departing and arriving during demobilisation period and coming of new army.

Gradual reduction of British work to peace time basis after armistice and throughout following year; strength on 31st December, 1919, 31 branches, 25 stations with 26 paid local secretaries and 3 supervisors. Indian branches, 36, with 36 secretaries.

During the five years a total of 74 different branches for British troops and 41 for Indians; 412 different men and women served as full-time paid workers for varying periods, besides a very large number of honorary helpers representing the general public,

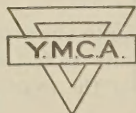

Efforts to link the British soldiers on to the social life of the station and to lead the community to feel a real responsibility, without patronizing, for the soldiers garrisoned among them.

Special endeavour through lectures, trips and literature to bring British troops into intelligently appreciative contact with the best in India and Indian life.

The usual social, recreational, educational and religious work on a large scale.

MESOPOTAMIA

The map illustrates the geographical layout of Mesopotamia, centered around the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. Beginning in Basra, July, 1915, with one secretary restricted to work among convalescent British troops, steady expansion until end of 1918 when there were 102 branches for both British and Indians, with 100 secretaries. Contraction to 35 centres by the end of 1919.

In all during the five years, 274 secretaries of whom 118 were Indians and Ceylonese.

Huts, dug-outs, mat sheds, tents in Base rest camps, convalescent depots, junction points, base depots, advance camps, hospital boats, stationary hospitals, on transports.

Canteens opened as an exceedingly necessary service, especially in the early days of hardship, supplementing army rations; continued throughout the period as a necessary feature of social life in the huts. Ensured cleanliness, quality and fair price. Up to December 31, 1918, total sales approximately, Rs. 47,44,613-11-5; profits, Rs. 7,31,956-6-7; maintenance expense of whole work, Rs. 16,46,161-12-9. Profits thus paid somewhat less than half the maintenance costs. Goods sold at an average of 15 per cent. above cost price to insure against loss and cover freight and handling. Prices uniform with those charged by E.F.C.

Special emphasis on educational work particularly during demobilisation period; officers and men of university training discovered and enlisted as lecturers; courses of study specially adapted to particular needs of troops, with systematic lectures and classes wherever conditions permitted. Over 100,000 Readers given free to sepoys; well-patronized libraries of vernacular books and translations. Simple lectures and classes on economic, physical and general subjects.

Hundreds of thousands of gallons of tea and lime-juice dispensed free, millions of sheets of writing-paper given away; distribution of gifts and comforts; hospital visitation.
